Nate Lovett represents insurers on the full spectrum of cyber risks, advising on first- and third-party claims and providing strategic counsel on media, technology, and privacy-related exposures. Nate frequently advises clients in connection with data breach class actions and claims involving AI, website tracking technologies, and privacy statutes such as BIPA, CIPA, GIPA, and VPPA.

Nate has advised on more than 500 ransomware incidents involving businesses of all sizes, and he routinely counsels clients on complex financial and accounting-related issues in the business interruption context.

Nate also routinely represents insurers in connection with the investigation and analysis of complex first-party losses under commercial crime policies and fidelity bonds.
